NPGA’s Mission: To advance safety and to increase the use of propane through sound public policy.
• Connect with peers, consultants, and industry partners at the sections’ business meetings held in conjunction with the NPGA Board of Directors Meetings.

• Additionally, all members are eligible to represent the section on the NPGA Board by serving as the section’s elected director.

• Full access to members-only content on both the NPGA and PropanePAC websites.

• An electronic subscription to NPGA Reports, the association’s premier source of news, information, and analysis of the propane industry.

• Advocacy tools, including the NPGAction app and opportunities to get involved with NPGA’s federal political action committee, PropanePAC.

• The Benchmarking Council provides opportunities for propane marketers to search for new ideas by comparing business practices with other marketers who share the same challenges.

• Women in Propane is a professional development council which supports the advancement and success of propane industry employees in every scope of business operations.
